As an educator, I understand some students only come to school because of a passion they have, like sports, debate club, science class or any one of the arts. When funding is tight, in my twenty plus year public education career, arts was always the first line item up for discussion to be cut! This practice must stop. I am a proponent of increasing arts funding at younger ages, to allow children to explore all modalities in every zip codes.

Art is life. Without color, music and dance, we cease to be human. Art is also therapy, and brings people who are disabled, sick and suffering with mental illness, with a creative release. Schools need art. Community needs art. Art is also found in our Gastronomy, and in Tucson's downtown architecture and historic-meets-modern scene. Tucson is beautiful because of the murals, metal sculptures and use/respect for light. I don't want to see Tucson without any of these these things.

I met Polly Cullen in 2018 when I first ran for office. Since then, she and I have become friends. As a local artist in Sedona, which is in our district, Polly has since offered her wonderful talents to our race. She has designed three original art works for our campaign both 2018 and in 2020.

Her paintings highlight the key issues and concerns of voters in our rural district, as well as imagery that captures aspects of my biography. Her work is colorful, full of energy and simply beautiful, and it was a wonderful experience to collaborate with her in its creation. We have used it for table centerpieces, and as the design for all our thank you note cards and postcards, and we are so grateful and privileged to be able to have original art pieces in our voter, volunteer and donor materials, and to be able to share her works so widely.

I believe I have benefitted from the arts throughout my life. As a child in the K-12 system I was first exposed to music in my learning to play a musical instrument. I believe this experience helped the other areas of my education as well as it sparked a different way of thinking and applying mathematical and creative practices.

In higher education, I studied artists through my cultural studies and I developed an appreciation and greater understanding of different expressions of culture, protest, love, fear and many other emotions that can't be communicated in the same way in written word. Since then I've always looked to the arts, be it physical art, dance, theater, or different forms of music to give me an escape from the regimented world we live in and re-connect to my personal emotions and things that matter the most.

I draw everyday. It keeps me centered and focused and is a very significant part of my life. While the term "artist" may not apply to me, art and the arts are important to me.

I am also an English teacher and have honor of teaching plays to my students. We rarely go to the theater as a class--there are just so many limitations--but I do the best I can to incorporate theater into class.

As a kid growing up in a small town, there were limited opportunities for participation in the arts. Unfortunately, that hasn't changed much today and there are still few opportunities for folks in our small rural communities to participate in arts programs. But one summer, when I was 10 or 11 years old, our community center offered folklorico dancing classes. I only participated for a few months because my parents couldn't afford the costumes for performances, but this experience exposed me to a beautiful aspect of my heritage and reflected the traditional dances of my people. It was an experience that sparked my deep appreciation for the arts.

Absolutely. The arts are a vital part of our lives together. They are not only an economic driver that attracts visitors, spending, and jobs to our state and communities, but the arts enrich people's lives beyond measure. They help broaden our perspective, nurture reflection and relationships, heal division, and deepen our connection. As an agent for our collective well-being as a society, the government has an important role to play in making sure that we have arts programs that are accessible and enriching in our communities.

Yes, my experience as a co-founder of Theater Works in 1986 was one of the pivotal experiences of my life. When David Wo's musical theater program outgrew Shadow Rock Church in 1986, we knew we had to do something to keep the magic going. As parents, performers, backstage crew, or audience members, we'd been changed by the experience of being part of a show. We'd seen the confidence it gave our kids to stand on a stage and shine - and felt the deep connection it created for all of us and our audiences. Working together on a show created a magic that transformed our lives and our community. We wanted to widen that circle and share that with others. So, we took out a lease on the barn at 67th Avenue and Thunderbird at Thanksgiving time, 1986, and poured our lives into transforming it into a theater. It took all of us working together to guarantee the lease, build a stage and seating, and rehearse a show. Three months later, when The Unsinkable Molly Brown opened, we all had a front row seat to the magic that happens when we work together to create something greater than ourselves. I'm incredibly proud that over the past 34 years, Theater Works has continued to enrich our community and the lives of tens of thousands of kids and adults.

In junior high and high school I took every photography class that was offered. I continued taking photography classes into college-but I never had the opportunity to learn color or digital. (I'm thrilled that the high schools in my district have darkrooms AND teach digital photography.) Despite all my training, my photography as an adult has been purely for fun. My husband took drawing classes in high school, but actually worked in photography and digital art and marketing for over a decade. As a family we enjoy museums and musical performances.
